Online nursing classes can be a valuable NURS FPX 4050 Assessment 1 Informatics and Nursing Sensitive Quality learning tool for beginners just entering the field, and even those who are switching careers. These virtual courses provide high-level, institution-designed information for students to review at their convenience.

Keeping up with online coursework requires a great deal of time and dedication. However, it is not impossible with the right support system and good study habits.

1. Identify Your Learning Style

Knowing your learning style is an important factor in successfully completing online nursing classes. This is because each person processes information differently and utilizes different study techniques.

For instance, visual learners learn best from words and pictures in a textbook or in audio recordings. These students are likely to take copious notes and can relate concepts to their surroundings (e.g., how they would give directions to their neighbor's house).

Auditory learners understand information through sound and may be able to repeat back what they have heard in their heads. The NURS FPX 4050 Assessment 1 Preliminary Care Coordination Plan will often be the most vocal students in class or prefer listening to a lecture recording of a lesson.

Kinesthetic learners understand their information through hands-on experiences and often do well when they write out their class notes or make notecards. Fortunately, online nursing schools typically offer multiple ways to access class materials and learning tools that can cater to all learning styles.

2. Make a Study Schedule

While online nursing courses provide flexibility and a sense of independence, they do require students to maintain time-management skills. Unlike in-classroom courses, online nursing programs often have more outside reading, assignments and due dates to manage.

Getting organized can help you stay on top of all the reading materials, class notes and study guides you will need to review for exams. You may also want to consider joining a study group, which allows you to collaborate with your peers and learn from each other's questions and comments about NURS FPX 4050 Assessment 2 Ethical and Policy Factors in Care course material.

Make sure to get enough sleep – many nursing students find that pulling all-nighters is an inevitable part of the journey! Also, remember to give yourself a break when needed. If you struggle with a course or concept, ask for help at the first sign of difficulty. Your instructor will be happy to answer questions and direct you to other resources if needed. The sooner you get on track, the better your chances of passing a course and obtaining your nursing license.

3. Create a Study Routine

Nursing is a demanding career, especially when taken online. Many students feel overwhelmed at times — and if not careful, can fall behind in classes. This can lead to failing courses or even the entire nursing program. To avoid falling NURS FPX 4050 Assessment 4 Final Care Coordination Plan, set a schedule to study and stick to it. One rule of thumb is to set aside two hours of study time for every hour in class.

Also, make it a point to review your class notes after each lecture while the content is still fresh. Additionally, join a study group if possible to learn from fellow nurses. They may be able to explain complex medical information in a way that sticks in your mind more than just reading the book. They may also be a shoulder to cry on when things get difficult in nursing school and encourage you to stay the course. Plus, studying with others will increase your accountability and motivation.

4. Make Study Notes

As a nursing student, it can be overwhelming to take notes in class, read the assigned chapters and study for exams. With all of the other responsibilities students often have at home and at work, it can be hard to find time for studying.

One way to help manage the load is by setting up a study group with fellow classmates, says Breana Sutter, an online ABSN student from Elmhurst University. Not only does this reduce stress by allowing you to get a study buddy, but it can also help you learn from each other as you share NURS FPX 4000 Assessment 2 Applying Research Skills tips for success in nursing school.

Another way to make studying easier is by using concepts and mind mapping for your notes, suggests Tyrhonda King, an MSN, RN, professional nurse tutor at Chamberlain College of Nursing. She recommends writing your topic at the top of your page and then making boxes around key points and supportive information that branch out from the main point.
